General Kuropatkin will become chief of both armies, but probably without the title of commander-in-chief.

Battle at Mukden Unlikely.

While still insisting that General Kuropatkin has sufficient troops at Mukden to contest the Japanese advance, the War Office admits that it is not likely that a decisive battle will be fought there. Everything goes to show that the main Russian position is now at Tie Pass, flanked by hills running out on the left and by the river on the right. Official reports to the War Office are to the cf-fect that the Japanese did not make any further move towards Mukden until September 17th, when reconnaissances in force disclosed that they were still massing at Yental and Bentslaputze. No Japanese have been discovered east of the latter point. The recomalissances, General Kuropatkin says, were brilliantly carried out by Generals Samsonoff's and Rennekampf's Cossack brigades, with a mixed detachment of Infantry and artillery under Rennekamp's personal command. They captured a village north of Bentslaputze, which was used as a pivot. The Russians drew off later, losing a few men killed or wounded, after securing valuable information regarding the Japanese strength and position. A couple of days earlier, General Mistchenkos's detachment of Cossacks reconnoitered toward Yental at the cost of a few sorie wounded, as feported in the Associated Press dispatch from Mukden, September 16th.

Fresh Troops Arrive. Fresh Troops Arrive.

Fresh Troops Arrive.

General Kuropatkin says he reviewed yesterday the Thirty-seventh Division, commanded by General Chekmareff, which bad then just arrived at Mukden. It belongs to the First European Corps, of which the Twenty-second Division, General Afanasoviich, reached Llao Yang in time to take part in the battle there. The appearance of the newly arrived European troops at Mukden, instead of being evidence of the complete Russian concentration there, as many persons hastily assumed, is more likely due to the decision of General Kuropatkin to get these fresh and untested troops in contact with the Japanese and give the soldiers who suffered the brunt of the fighting at Liao Yang an opportunity to rest and recuperate.

public appreciation of the real character of the fighting in the neighborhood of Liao Yang.

General Kuropatkin's plans had been an object of much derision in certain circles in the city, as elsewhere, but the results have shown that the Russian commander not only had a plan, and a well conceived one at that, but also that he carried it to a successful conclusion.

Even where it is claimed that the Japanese was a technical victory, it is acknowledged that the success obtained was hardly commensurate with the sacrifices it involved.

Before General Kuropatkin had made good his retreat it was frequently asked why, in the words of the Economist, the Russian reverses served only to strengthen the price of the country's bonds, while at the same time they caused a weakness in the Japanese issues, and the paper mentioned has gone into the subject in a leading article in which a variety of reasons for this apparent paradox are recited. Of them all the most important is the fear that a further heavy issue of Japanese securities will be made before long. As bearing upon this subject the following extract from the financial columns of the Outlook is of interest:

ANSWER TO . RECENT NOTE

Follows Generally the Lines of the Reply to Great Britain.

(By Associated Press.) ST. PETERSBURG, September 19.—The Russian answer to the American notes in regard to contraband of war, as specifically raised in the cases of the British steamer Calchas and the Portland Asiatic line steamer Arabia, has been delivered. It follows generally the lines of the reply to Great Britain. On the broad question involved Russia recognizes the principles of the immunity of innocent trade with Japanese ports, but she holds to her right to stop contraband destined for the use of the Japanese military or naval forces. The United States is informed that instructions embodying the decision of the commission, presided over by Pro fessor Do Martins, have been issued in the form of instructions to the naval commanders and prize courts, to govern them in the future, the instructions recognizin the future, the instructions recognizing the dualness, and, therefore, the conditionally contraband character of the articles of foodstuffs, rice, etc., enumerated in section ten of article six of the Russian regulations, with the exception of horses and other beasts of burden.
Russia will not undertake at this stage to interfere with the cases of the steamships Arabia and Calchas, of which the courts have taken jurisdiction, and in which the Viallyosiok court found the ships Arabia and Calcinas, of which the courts have taken jurisdiction, and in which the Vladivostok court found the facts, but, upon appeal, the admiralty court will apply its interpretation of section ten, which practically amounts to an assurance that the flour, etc., selzed will then be released. It is improbable, however, that all the articles confiscated by the lower court will be released. As far as the Associated Press can learn, the commission's decision, as embodied in the instructions, does not go beyond the articles enumerated. In section ten, from which it is inferred, coal, railroad material, machinery and bollers for ships and even cotton are enumerated along with munitions of war, etc., in other articles which remain in the category of absolute contraband. It is understood, however, that private assurances have been ever, that private assurances have been given the United States that the American government would be satisfied with the manner in which the contraband rules will be interpreted hereafter.

Griffith Men Have the Better of the Exciting Pennant Race.

With but eighteen more days to play and about twenty games to be played, the base-ball clubs of the American Lengue are now engaged in a strenuous struggle for the season's honors. The pennant race of this league has been one of the most interesting in the history of base-ball. For half of the season the Boston and New York teams have been neck and neck, the actual lead alternating from day to day with surprising frequency. The contest for premier honors lies between these two teams, and they are about as evenly matched as they are about as evenly matched as they could be a surprise of the season give them about an even chance for the games yet to be played. New York has twenty-one games yet to play, as follows: Two at home with Washington, four at Chicago, four at Cleveland three at St. Louis, three at Detroit, and then five at home with Boston. New Yorks percentage for the season with the clubs yet to be played is 624, and the first far to expect they will do a well with those teams.

Boston/Inds/yet, to_play the following the Exciting Pennant Race.

Nork's percentage for the season with the clubs yot to be played is 18M and it is fair to expect they will do as well with those teams.

Boston and sexpect they will do as well with those teams.

Boston and the play the following mineteen games: Two of thome with Philadelphia, three cach at Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis, and Detroit, and five at New York.

For the next two days Now York has Washington as Goodnent, while Boston has a much more difficult proposition in Philadelphia, which is struggling hard for third and possibly second place. Granting that New York will be as successful against washington as Boston is against the Athletica. Both teams will then so west, New York for fourteen games and Boston for twelve, Granting that each wins just half of these western games, they was and lost columns of the rivals will read thus: New York won eighty-seven; Boston won eighty-seven and lost fifty-seven; Boston won eighty-seven; Boston won the work of the games at New York. So, Boston 18M.

Then the seven will come in the final series of five games at New York will be almost if not quite what they now york, 860. Boston 18Ms won 634 of its season's games, while against its future confectiors Boston has won but 55 per cent. of its vestern games, however, and the percentages at the close of the season will be almost if not quite what they now year, games, while against its future confectiors Boston has won but 55 per cent. of its remaining twelve games in the Vest and with a fairly good lead now, and the closing series

With every effort honestly made to avoid misreporting in the McCue matter, your correspondent must confess to having made a misstatement, which, at the time of its making, he had every reason to believe it was absolutely correct. It seems that the prisoner's pastor, Dr. George L. The officer who told the reporter of the proposed visit left his informant under the impression that it was an event and not merely a part of the reverend gentleman's practice.

They took breakfast at the camp mess, which was good and was enjoyed immensely as they had arison at 6:30 and were unable to get breakfast before reaching camp. Captain Edwaras, surgeon of the battalion, made air inspection of the camp on arrival and found things to be in first-class order. He stated that the sanitary arrangements were excellent and that his men were in fine condition, not one being confined to the hospital. Major Cheatwood declared himself highly pleased with the camp and complimented his men most highly on their conduct during the tiresome trip. He and his staff were kept busy during the day arranging matters for the battalion. The boys have not donned their handsome uniforms, owing to the condition of the weather, but they are confident of making a great hit when they appear. No drills were held to-day, owing to the fact that the men were much fatigued after their long journey on the cars. on the cars.
